Did You Know?

Blue Lake has almost 150 acres of common space, and much of that is on the hillside up to Missouri Heights all the way to the ridge line. If you've never hiked the trail, you don't know what you're missing. We ask that everyone treat this area respectfully and pack out all trash. In the spring we will include this area on our volunteer clean-up day.

Yard Waste

Winter is Here

Although Joe Meade eventually makes sure all hydrants are not buried in the snow, please share this important responsibility with your neighbors after fresh snow falls. The home it saves could be yours.

Thank You!

Thanksgiving has always been my favorite holiday. With the current state of the economy it's easy to get caught up in the negative. If you missed it, The Denver Post had a spectacular photo of our pond on the front page of the "Denver & the West" section (Oct. 23 issue.) The view out of the office window is one thing I appreciate everyday; especially in the fall. We really do have a little piece of paradise in Blue Lake.

Sending "nasty grams" to CC&R violators is my least favorite part of the job. This month I'm exceedingly grateful for the very few violations there have been. I'd also like to say how great the place is looking. So many have recently painted or re-done landscaping and the whole neighborhood is benefitting.

I also appreciate those who serve on our board of directors. Susie, Missen, and Scott....I'll miss working with you! Thanks also to Joe Meade and his crew for working so hard to keep this place looking and running great.
